Editorial Review

Review

Well-organized and easy to read...It's obvious that Lightner knows the country well. An essential resource for any climber heading to Thailand. (Jackson Hole News & Guide)

From the Publisher

Tsunami postscript: In early January 2005, author Sam Lightner, Jr. returned to Thailand to provide assistance in the wake of the December 26, 2004 tsunami and to survey conditions of the climbing areas included in his book. "The climbing routes were mostly unscathed by the tsunami floods," says Lightner. "Railae Beach is almost 100 percent functional and suffered minimal damage. Koh Phi Phi will take awhile to return to normal, but the climbing areas are still accessible. Some of the travel businesses I reference in the book were destroyed, but I'm confident that these will be rebuilt, probably even better than before. Thailand remains an amazing climbing destination and climbers, through their tourism dollars, can help this part of the world bounce back from this terrible tragedy."

About the Author

SAM LIGHTNER JR. is an internationally known rock climber with more than twenty years of climbing experience who has made first ascents of over 100 routes. He has appeared on the cover of Outside magazine, and he has written articles for Vertical, Rock and Ice, Climbing, Conde Naste Adventure Traveler, and American Alpine Journal, among other publications. His adventure narrative All Elevations Unknown: An Adventure in the Heart of Borneo (published by Random House imprint Broadway) received favorable reviews from USA Today, Kirkus Reviews, Deseret News, Explorers Club Book Review, and Outside magazine. Currently Lightner divides his time between Banff, Alberta; Jackson Hole, Wyoming; and southern Thailand. He's become well-known in the Thailand climbing scene for his work putting up new routes and rebolting existing routes on the Phra Nang Peninsula; popular climbing website www.8a.nu recently called him "the man behind Railae Beach."
