Islamic Crosspollinations: Interactions in the Medieval Middle East (Gibb Memorial Trust Arabic Studies) By James Montgomery, Anna Akasoy, Peter E. Pormann

Islam as a cultural, intellectual, and religious venture appears in the popular imagination as a monolithic entity. Orientalists of the traditional ilk have tended to describe it in essentialist terms, whilst many fundamentalist Muslims themselves promote their construction of a pure and unadulterated Islamic past, to which they strive to return by purging foreign or unauthentic elements from their religion. Next to these attempts, another more traditional view sees the influence between the Western and the Islamic world in linear and teleological terms. Knowledge was transmitted, so to speak, from Alexandria to Baghdad, and hence to Toledo and Paris. The present volume challenges both these concepts regarding the development of Islamic cultures. To do justice to the complexity of structures within which the Muslim Middle Ages unfolded, it approaches the questions of interaction and influence through a novel conceptual framework, that of crosspollination. Instead of telling the story of the transmission of Western works from Greece via Islam into the Latin world, a number of case studies highlight the plurality of encounters between Islam and other adjacent cultures.

As a college student exactly feel bored to help reading. If their teacher questioned them to go to the library or to make summary for some guide, they are complained. Just very little students that has reading's heart and soul or real their passion. They just do what the professor want, like asked to the library. They go to generally there but nothing reading very seriously. Any students feel that reading through is not important, boring and also can't see colorful images on there. Yeah, it is to be complicated. Book is very important for yourself. As we know that on this era, many ways to get whatever you want. Likewise word says, ways to reach Chinese's country. So , this Islamic Crosspollinations: Interactions in the Medieval Middle East (Gibb Memorial Trust Arabic Studies) can make you really feel more interested to read.
