Invasion: The Conquest of Serbia, 1915 (War, Technology, and History) By Richard L. DiNardo

This extended study of one of the critical campaigns of World War I sheds light on vital strategic consequences for both sides.

- Examines the campaign from the perspective of the Central Powers, rather than from the Serbian point of view
- Shows that the assault on Serbia was pivotal in that it led to the unraveling of the overall conflict for Germany
- Features research conducted at the German federal military archives in Freiburg, the Bavarian military archives in Munich, the Austrian archives in Vienna, and the Baden-Württemberg archives in Stuttgart
- Draws from official histories, regimental histories, memoirs, and first-person accounts
- Marks the 100th anniversary of the 1915 campaign

Editorial Review

Review

"Serbia 1915 is a mystery no more. In clinical Clausewitzian fashion, DiNardo has scrupulously dissected brutal combat in the most difficult terrain and weather imaginable. Great staff work, heavy artillery, and superior engineering troops deploying aircraft, railroads, and telephones to advantage assured that a minor power caught in a protracted war against military giants collapsed. This is a masterful battlefield history that must be read." (Holger H. Herwig, Professor of History and Canada Research Chair, University of Calgary)

"Richard DiNardo reminds us that wars produce unintended consequences. Nowhere was this more true than in the Balkans in 1914. This book shines an important light on a little-known campaign from World War I that should be of far wider interest to students of modern warfare." (Michael S. Neiberg, author of Dance of the Furies: Europe and the Outbreak of War in 1914)

"The Central Powers' overrunning of Serbia in 1915 was a proto-blitzkrieg. State of the art material, aircraft, heavy artillery, and bridging technology, employed by a command and staff system at peak effectiveness, overwhelmed a semi-modern army and offered a portent for the future of war. This model case study of a neglected campaign confirms DiNardo's place among the Great War's elite operational historians." (Dennis E. Showalter, Professor of History, Colorado College)
